Inspired Shelter for the Spirited Wanderer

Restoring and Uplifting Spaces, Places and People

Once upon a time...

The Vanadium Corporation arrived in 1942 to a remote and wild corner of Colorado. The Manhattan project was underway and the Uranium rich area was full of patriots and prosperity. They built the quaint town of VANCORUM to house the engineers who worked in the nearby mill. The town was modeled after an east coast Main Street so the New Yorkers would feel more at home. You can still feel the nostalgic summer nights they would have experienced when the town was full of young families and day to day life in a mining town.

Fast forward to 1970

The surrounding economy was transformed from mining to reclamation. The bustling town of Uravan with over 1000 residents, a hospital, swimming pool and school was condemned.

Jobs dried up and many left. Vancorum was spared as it did not contain mining activities. It is one of the last pieces of history that exists from this era. An era that is a major part of American history.

Transforming history

Vancorum was mostly untouched and remained a relic and long term housing community until it changed hands through our ownership group in 2017.

In 2020 CampV was born

This Little-known Colorado Gem Combines Glamping, Art, and Desert Adventures

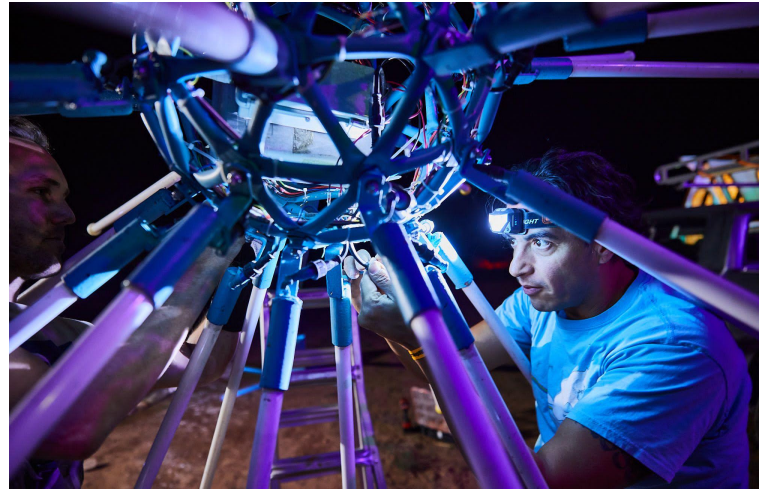

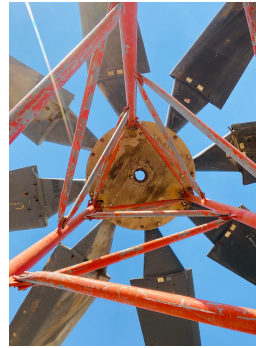

An arts non-profit is born

WE believe that all rural communities deserve access to inspiring art and opportunity. We created WEarts as an avenue to bring a higher level of art, programming and exposure to the entire community and CampV.

The local community does not have an Arts non-profit or programs and thus WE Arts was born.

The non-profit is able to provide arts based programming at CampV for the community through grants and donations.

WEarts hosts a music and arts festival in May called Planet V

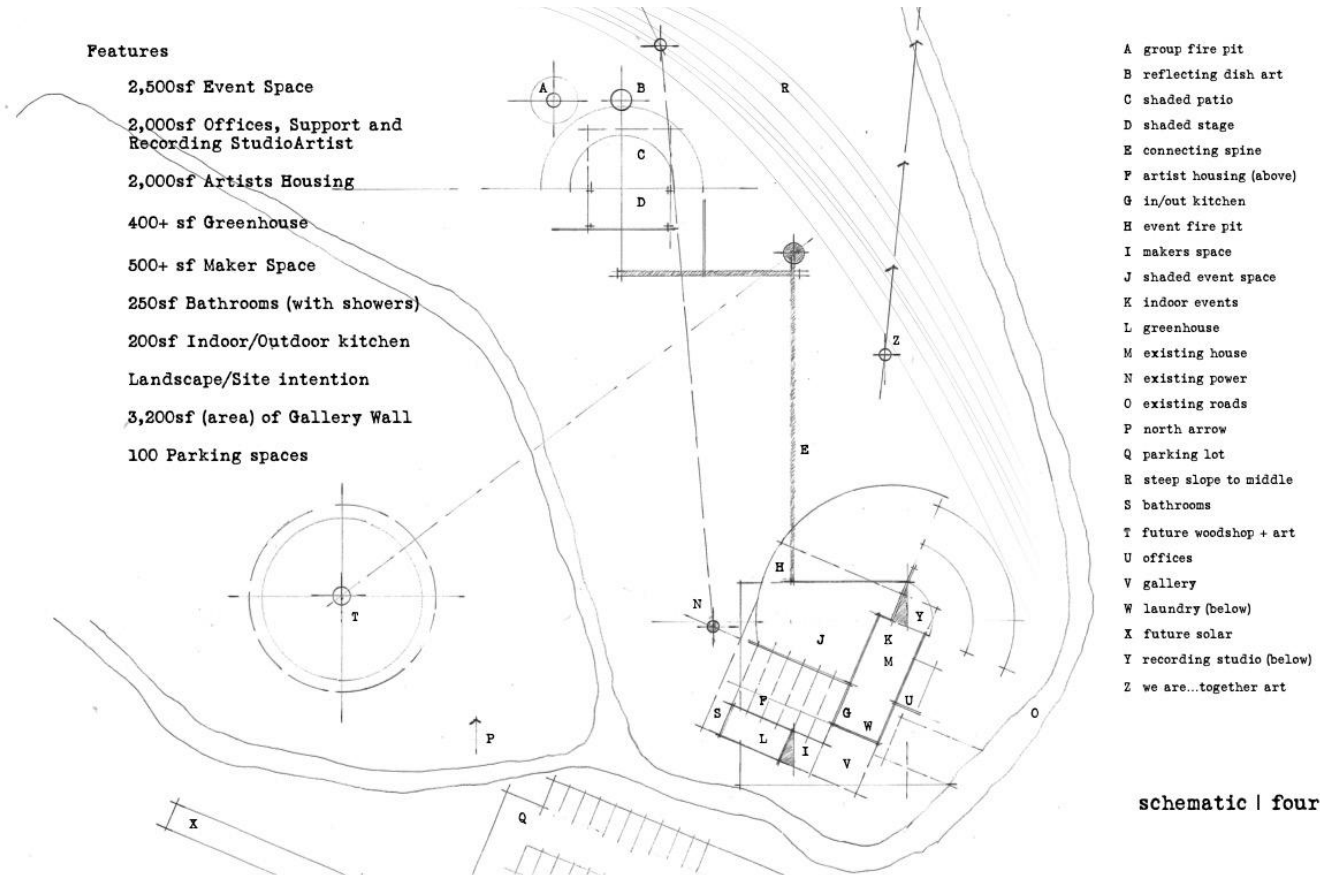

WEarts

WE [West End] Arts

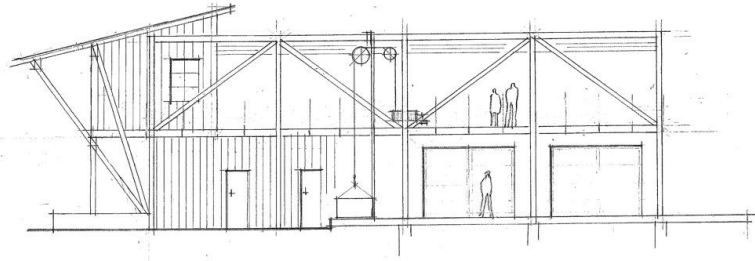

WEarts mission is to promote, create and program art in a variety of mediums in the West End community to foster connection, curiosity and creation. WE believe good public art and programming can create a sense of pride of place.

We believe that by creating art in rural locations we can bring people together and create new paths and conversations.

CampV receives a $2M grant to build Vtrove for WEarts and community events
